10. On 16 August at 3 p.m. two large Soviet-made bombers landed at Lunghua Airfield. It was said they had come to Shanghai for refueling and were in the process of a long-distance flight from Europe. Each plane took 60 drums of gasoline plus several tens of gallons of an unknown type fuel. These planes were inspected and serviced exclusively by Soviet personnel. The planes were said to be Tupolev Type-6 (sic). The planes had wings swept back at 45 degrees and six "chieh tao" (僚機).¹ The engines were under the wings.
11. On their return trip to Europe the two large bombers had a fighter escort, and while en route back one of them (sic) crashed at the foot of Chilianshan (98-42, 39-10), Kansu.²
